RIM wants small businesses to manage their BlackBerries on the cloud-- through its newly announced BlackBerry Management Center.

The free online service will allow businesses with up to 100 company- or employee-owned Blackberry devices to manage and protect business-related content the smartphones might carry.

Commercial users wanting the service need to access email via either ISP or web-based services and have devices running on BlackBerry OS 4.6 or later.

Its offerings include automatic wireless data backup (on a daily, weekly or monthly basis), content protection (via remote locking or data diping) and lost BlackBerry location.

Blackberry Management Service is already available through link below.
